THE 23RD STAGING of Asian Art in London will happen in two distinct phases, commencing with Indian and Islamic art followed by East Asian art, with some dealers and salerooms showing in both categories. Since March this year the Covid-19 virus has cast a shadow over art fairs and events with most global fairs postponing or cancelling. Asian Art in London therefore is a cautious but welcome change from purely virtual events with gallery exhibitions operating with social distancing, private appointments (some), and sanitisation. To be safe, some exhibitors have chosen not to offer refreshments or take part in late-night receptions, so it is advisable for visitors to plan carefully. This celebration of Asian art in central London will embrace ancient and modern works from the Middle East, India, Southeast Asia, the Himalayas, Central Asia, China, Japan, Korea and Vietnam.
